"Toilet theme park" opens in South Korea
11th November, 2012

A city in South Korea has added a new attraction to its cultural landscape - the world's first "toilet theme park". The Restroom Cultural Park in the city of Suwon is proving a huge hit with locals and tourists alike. The latest tourist site is dedicated to the memory of former city mayor Sim Jae-duck, affectionately known as "Mr Toilet". He believed the toilet is a very important and under-appreciated aspect of world culture. Visitors to the park can admire its toilet-bowl-shaped exhibition hall as well as dozens of bronze statues in various toilet positions. They can even sit on Mr Sim's original toilet, which includes a full-length glass door that mists up when it is being used.

Suwon has become well known for the promotion of toilet culture. The city attracts toilet-related artwork from around the world to its galleries. It famously hosts the Golden Poop Art Festival – a celebration of one of the calls of nature. The city also lists dozens of its own public toilets as tourist attractions on its website. Sim Jae-duck's own giant, toilet-shaped house, now a museum, should be the must-see for enthusiasts. Mr Sim's fascination with toilets supposedly began because he was born in the smallest room of his mother's house. He said in 2007: "The toilet...can save humankind from diseases [and is] a place for introspection. The toilet is also a central living place that possesses culture."

Role Play
The mayor of the city - You are very happy with the new theme park. Think of three reasons why. You don't like people who say negative things about the theme park. You believe it will be one of Korea's biggest attractions. Your city will be famous around the world and that will bring in lots of tourist dollars.

An election candidate for mayor - You are shocked the theme park got opened. Think of three reasons why. You believe it deeply embarrasses the city. Your number one election promise is to tear it down. You know the mayor is receiving money secretly from toilet makers. You want to spend city money on a sanitation research park.

Mr Toilet’s close friend - You are so proud of Sim Jae-duck. Think of three reasons why. He cared deeply for poor people in the world. He really worried that people died of disease because they had no toilet. The theme park is important to raise global awareness. You want it expanded, with Restroom Cultural Parks built worldwide.

An art lover - You cannot believe anyone can celebrate toilet culture as art. Think of three reasons why. You will provide millions of dollars to change the theme park into a museum for traditional Korean arts. This will bring in more money and make the city famous internationally – for a good reason.
